All roses, after they have ceased blooming, should be cut back, that the strength of the root should go to forming new roots for next year, and on these bushes not a

Then place it for a week or ten days in a shalow dish, in which a little water is coustantly kept, and as the sponge will absorb the moisture, the seeds will begin to sprout before many days. When this has fairly taken place, the sponge may be suspended by means of cords from a hook in the top of the window, where a little sun will enter. It will thus become like a mass of green, and can be kept wet by merely immersing it in a bowl of water.

BOYLE & CHAPMAN'S CITY DIRECTO-RY .- The Masonic Jewel, for this month, has the following very complimentary and deserved notice of this work: "Boyle & Chapman, our publishers, have placed us under obligations by putting in our hands (they should have put it on our table) a directory of Memhis the only directory ever published by them or any other person that appears to have been gotten up with suffi-cient care and labor, and that does justice to Memphis as a city. The work is large, and as complete as could be made under the circumstances. Our city does not furnish the statistics that many other cities do, therefore nearly everything of that character has to be furnished by enterprising publishers. The chamber of commerce has a secretary who has the energy and determination to secure statistics of everything that can be of interest in his line of observation. Let us have census-takers, inspectors, assessors, teachers and officers that will give us more information in their line of duty. We are glad the field is now left to Messrs. Boyle & Chapman to furnish our city with directories here-

Opinion delivered by Chief-Justice Nicholson, March 7, 1874.

The clerk and master of the chancery court at Lebanon, having in his hands, as clerk, the funds of various parties, subject to distribution under the orders of the court, submitted to the chancellor, by petition, the question, whether it was his duty, under section 33 of the assessment act of March 25, 1873, to report said funds for assessment. The chancellor held that the funds should be assessed for taxation, and that the same should be reported to the assessor for encourage and patronize the Jewel, which at all times will be found a source owners of the funds have appealed. The section of the act of 1873, under which the question arises, is as follows: Section 33. "That persons acting as executors, administrators, guardians, agents or attorneys, or in any fiduciary capacity whatever, shall make a return of the property, moneys, credits and effects held by them in either of said capacities, separate from their individual returns, and the same shall be listed separately for taxation," etc. It is insisted for the appellants that the true construction of this section is, that if the clerk is merely the custodian of the property or moneys, the rights of the parties being fixed, the same should be assessed by and in this manner. But if the cierk has a special property in property or funds as trustee, etc., by virtue of an appointment of the court, real owners not being sui juris, or their rights not being settled, the assessment should be made by and in the name of

We are unable to discover in the language of the section that the legislature intended to make the distinction contended for. The leading object was to provide the means by which all property, moneys, etc., should be reached taxation. To ascertain and assess all such property, money, etc., was the first thing to be secured. To effect this object, section thirty-three was intended to reach all such property, moneys, etc., not in the actual possession or under the actual control of the owners thereof. Hence it is made the duty of all persons acting as executors, administrators, guardians, agents, or in any flduciary capacity whatever, to make returns, etc The language is as broad and comprehensive as language could well make it. It was not intended that this duty should be confined to executors, administrators, guardians, or others acting in any fiduciary capacity whatever, but it is expressly imposed also on "agents or attorneys." That this language was used with the intention of embracing after. If they are properly supported in their undertaking the public will have no occasion to find fault with them in

READ Ditson & Co.'s advertisement of Esther, and of the "Old Folks."

THREE things are requisite for a good redicine for throat and lung diseases. It should be a good receipt, made from pure material and scientifically prepared. Mansfield's Hungarian Baisam of Life will, upon test, be found to pos-sess completely all of these qualifica-tions, and it can be unhesitatingly recommended for coughs, colds, and all diseases of the lungs. A popularity which has steadily increased during the last quarter of a century fully verifies the truthfulness of this statement, and, indeed, without merit, it is scarcely possible that a medicine which had at first a merely local reputation should have attained an extensive demand coming from over twenty States. The formula for Mansfield's Hungarian Balsam of Life is by no means a secret. The names of each of the ingredients are given upon the wrapper of the bottle, and its mode of preparation will be freely explained to all inquirers. The full aim and intention is to have a medicine which can be relied upon at all times, and upon this the proprietors stake their reputation. We should be glad to have hose who suffer from influenza, bronchitis, asthma, consumption, or any similar disease, give Manafield's Hungarian Balsam a thorough trial.
